

Italy

Marco Bazzicalupo
& Stefano Mocali

12-03-2019: Photos from the “Microbial Ecology Day”, a dissemination event for undergraduate students with interactive experiences with soil and soil microbial life.

12-12-2019: National conference entitled “Importance of soil microbial ecology in viticulture” held at the University of Florence and dedicated to students and young researchers, but also common citizens and other stakeholders

19-06-2020: Dr. Stefano Mocali, ISME Young Ambassador of Italy, delivered a webinar on soil microbial ecology for young microbiologists attending the Biodiversity School of the Italian Society of Soil Science

The Italian Council for Research in Agriculture (CREA) and University of Florence (UNIFI) will hold the First Florence Microbial Ecology Day (FloMED-1), on next 21 November 2020 at CREA, Florence, Italy. The event aims to promote collaborations and networking among young microbial ecologists and will be supported by ISME